SUBJECT: Improper Disposal of Used Engine Oil

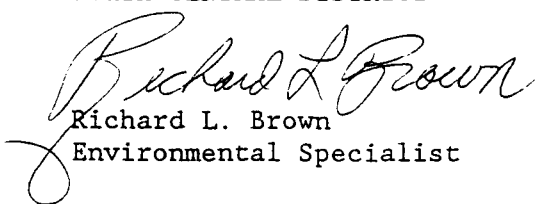

Dear Ron Reese:

It has been brought to our attention that you may have improperly disposed used engine oil on April 26, 1990. Used oil may be considered a hazardous waste if it displays any of the following characteristics: ignitable, corrosive, reactive, and/or E.P. toxic (containing pesticides, heavy metals or both) are considered hazardous waste and is regulated according to how it is handled or managed. Failure to comply with regulations could result in a large fine or prison sentence.

I have enclosed DNR Fact Sheets on oil generators and a list of some waste oil markets that will recycle used oil.

If you have any questions or concerns, please call me at 359-4522.

Sincerely,
NORTH CENTRAL DISTRICT
